12. Bill 109 contains a number of provisions intended to prevent work from having a negative impact on young workers' schooling and to safeguard their health and safety at work. For example, it proposes to prohibit 12- to 15-year-olds from working more than two hours on school days and more than eight hours on non-school days, and from working after 9:00 p.m. It also proposes to restrict younger children from working in certain types of jobs. If these rules were put in place, do you believe parents or guardians should be able to exempt their children from them?
